DETAILED ACTION

1. Claims 1-4 are presented for examination. Claims 5-12 have been cancelled by the applicant in paper 7.
2. The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. code not included in this office action can be found in prior office action.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. Claims 1 and 4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Jackson et al, U.S. Patent Number 6,052,779.
4. Jackson et al was cited in the previous office action.
5. As per claim 1, Jackson et al taught the invention substantially as claimed including a data processing network (col.2, lines 3-12) comprising:
  - a. A server computer system (col.2, lines 3-12, col.3, lines 16-19);
  - b. A portable client computer system capable of communicating with said server computer system (col.2, lines 3-12, col.3, lines 16-29);
  - c. A control means, connected to said server computer system, for issuing a wake-up request to said portable client computer system via a connection to switch said portable client computer system to a normal operating state from a low-power or off state, and for issuing a request to said portable client computer system via said connection to disable said portable client computer system (col.2, lines 3-12, col.4, lines 28-37, 58-65, col.5, lines 2-27, 38-42, col.8, lines 22-31); and

- d. A network adapter, connected to said portable client computer system, for disabling said portable client computer system from further operations in response to said request (col.2, lines 28-37, col.5, lines 2-27).

6. Jackson et al did not specifically teach that the communication between the server and the client is wireless and the request is issued via a wireless connection. However, Jackson et al did mention that the connection between the controlling system and the client computer system could be of other arrangement (col.3, lines 16-19). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to replace the network to wireless connections, such as wireless LAN, to Jackson et al's system to enable communications to the client computer system when no physical network connection is available.

7. As per claim 4, Jackson et al taught the invention substantially as claimed in claim 1. Jackson et al further taught that the wherein the wake-up request includes a Wake-on-LAN frame (col.4, lines 28-38).

8. Claim 2 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Jackson et al, U.S. Patent Number 6,052,779, as applied to claim 1 above, and further in view of McCain et al, U.S. Patent Number 6,052,779.

9. McCain was cited in the previous office action.

10. As per claim 2, Jackson et al taught the invention substantially as claimed in claim 1. Jackson et al did not specifically teach that the wireless connection is a satellite data link. McCain et al taught a data communication system to use satellite data link to provide data interchange (col.1, lines 42-44, col.2, lines 16-20, 52-55). It would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to combine the teachings of Jackson et al and McCain et al because McCain et al's teaching of using satellite data link as the wireless connection would provide a network control function for all devices in Jackson et al's system.

11. Claim 3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Jackson et al, U.S. Patent Number 6,052,779, as applied to claim 1 above, and further in view of Spicer, U.S. Patent Number 6,097,760.

12. Spicer was cited in the previous office action.

13. As per claim 3, Jackson et al taught the invention substantially as claimed in claim 1. Jackson et al did not specifically teach that the wireless connection is a DECT link. Spicer taught a data communication system using a DECT link as the wireless connection between the controlling system and the client computer system (col.1, lines 51-58, col.2, lines 12-14, 57-63, col.3, lines 61-65). It would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to combine the teachings of Jackson et al and Spicer because Spicer's teaching of using DECT link as the wireless connection enables Jackson et al's system for use in a radio in a local loop system.

Conclusion

14. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-4, filed on 2/7/2003, have been fully considered but are not deemed to be persuasive.

15. In the remark, applicant argued that Jackson et al fails to teach "a control means ... for issuing a request to said portable client computer system via said satellite link to disable said portable client computer system" and "a network adapter ... for disabling said portable client computer system from further operations in response to said request."

16. Examiner respectfully traverses applicant's remark.

- a. In response to applicant's argument that the references fail to show certain features of applicant's invention, it is noted that the features upon which applicant relies (i.e., satellite link) are not recited in the rejected claim(s). Although the claims are interpreted in light of the specification, limitations from the specification are not read into the claims. See In re Van Geuns, 988 F.2d 1181, 26 USPQ2d 1057 (Fed. Cir. 1993).
- b. Furthermore, Jackson et al taught a control mean and a network adapter (see claim 1 rejection above).

17. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
